I was outstanding and hardworking student until covid, after covid, there was military coup and university shut down, then I try to find another career, discover web development, I feel like it is suitable for me, and teach myself , dedicate hours despite being busy with other things, my younger self would never have imagined me studying late without someone pushing. From start, I didn't even have a laptop, wifi and daily electricity, I coded on my old phone that I have been using for 7 years, I can't believe I did not stop, if I were to go back, I might have given up. now coding is a part of my life, I like building stuff.

I want to get a job, to be a good son again, given my education and environment background and my incompetency, I will propably never get a job, I know it myself, even so, I will keep on coding, it keeps me away from negative thoughts, better than meditation.
